OUR NEW LAND in Tennessee: A site is being prepared at the future location of the William Luther Pierce Memorial Library and Research Center.

New National Alliance Land

In the spring of this year the realtor who had listed for sale the unused and uninhabited back portion (not including our campus buildings) of the Alliance's West Virginia property for former Alliance Chairman Erich Gliebe in 2013, Mr. Oak Hall, approached Chairman Williams and expressed his interest in purchasing that back property for himself, since he already owned 650 acres surrounding that steep timbered tract. (A lien had been placed on the property four years ago by the NARRG grouplet as part of their efforts to put the National Alliance in receivership. That lien was lifted when the NARRG lawsuit was dismissed in 2016.)

A National Alliance board meeting was held this May to discuss the possibility of our selling that tract to Mr. Hall and using the proceeds to expand our facilities in Tennessee. Chairman Williams was authorized to negotiate an agreement with Mr. Hall and accept his offer, if reasonable. A price was negotiated and a closing was set to occur, after a title search and a certified survey of the land was completed on 22 June. The proceeds from the sale of the National Alliance's relinquished West Virginia land were set to be reinvested in a replacement property, also to be owned by the Alliance. Chairman Williams negotiated to purchase new property in Laurel Bloomery, Tennessee soon after.

The arrangement to sell the back portion of our West Virginia property was held up during the title search when it was discovered that another lien, of which we were unaware, had been placed on our property by John McLaughlin, or by his "Executive Administrative Assistant and Legal Liaison," Garland DeCourcy, in their copycat version of the NARRG lawsuit, which was also dismissed. McLaughlin died in 2017.

Nevertheless, the lien was still there, and it took an additional two and a half months and nearly ten thousand dollars in legal costs, working across four states, to lift the second lien on our property, while maintaining the Alliance's active $850,000 counterclaim against McLaughlin's estate. (The Alliance's counterclaim has now been properly amended and transferred to Illinois for eventual trial or settlement. There are no guarantees that we will prevail, but we are in a superior position because McLaughlin's flagrant breach of fiduciary duties, working with the NARRG grouplet and their attorney in a $2,000,000 lawsuit against the National Alliance, while he was supposed to be serving as a National Alliance director, is indefensible.)

After we succeeded in having the lien lifted, the transactions on both properties were closed in September. The National Alliance will own the new property in perpetuity. Plans are to, first, build a facility for Cosmotheist Books on this land; and then other facilities will be built as our needs and capabilities expand.

So, now the National Alliance owns over 50 acres of prime land right next to our National Office and staff, free and clear, in the unincorporated community of Laurel Bloomery, Tennessee. During July, with the Tennessee seller's permission (even though the sale was held up until the lien could be lifted), we bush-hogged some trails and a couple of potential building sites.

During October, once the Alliance had title to the land, we have gone "full tilt," clearing those sites and building a proper road to the interior plateau: the future site of the William Luther Pierce Memorial Library.

The National Alliance has been paying over $3,000 per year in West Virginia property taxes on its non-income-producing relinquished property, but the property tax on our new replacement property is less than $400 per year with a greenbelt waiver for forest protection. Access to the Tennessee land is infinitely better than the abysmal, nearly mile-long rutted, obstacle course of a drive into the remote West Virginia property, and it is a proverbial stone's throw from the current National Office, which greatly aids management. The National Alliance and the Cosmotheist Community Church still own and maintain the remaining, developed 82-acre campus in West Virginia where all of the buildings are located, but our National Office has been headquartered in Laurel Bloomery since October of 2014.

Workers Needed

Our Alliance still has less than one tenth the number of dues-paying members and supporters that we enjoyed when our founder died in 2002. Doubling the minimum monthly dues from $10 per month to $20 has helped and has assured a more committed, if smaller, following than before, but the revenue stream from monthly dues barely pays expenses, and income from selling books online has been hampered repeatedly by those — SPLC and their ilk — who want to make sure we have few funds for Alliance-building projects. We hope our membership will continue to grow, to generate more income. Until then, or until we receive considerably more in donations from those who believe in what we're doing, we will struggle along making do with what we have.

We won't be able to do much construction on the new Tennessee land until spring. We'll be maintaining our new road; doing seeding and erosion control; setting up fencing, gates, and utilities. Planning building sites and designs over the winter months, and figuring out how to pay for the early stages of our work without going into debt, will keep us busy. We hope to get lots of helpful input from our membership, especially from that one lucky ramrod foreman-type with construction skills, who is "good in the woods" and who is willing to relocate. Applications for that job are being accepted now. I know we have members who fit that bill, and can give us a one-year or more commitment.

Jim Mathias Update

Donations from Alliance members to Jim's Defense Fund fell off to $280 during October, from the $1,100 collected in September, bringing the total donated to $1,960 since July. Members are encouraged to keep helping Jim pay the $5,000 legal expenses he incurred for his activism. Please mail your donations to the National Alliance address in Tennessee, as shown on the cover of this BULLETIN, and designate the funds as being for the Jim Mathias Defense Fund, or JMDF. Jim still awaits word on his appeal of the bogus conviction for having a "firearm on school property." His second arrest for eight "attempted burglaries" was thrown out by the prosecutor and Jim is in the process of receiving the supposed "evidence" that was to have been used against him, which may prove valuable. Jim deserves our help.

Correspondence

Will, I was disappointed to see that you are selling David Irving's Goebbels. Have you opened that book? It's terrible. It is not in any way helpful. He wrote that book to try to get the Jews off his back. I used to have a high regard for Irving but now I would say that much of his work is very flawed. The reason is that he is more interested in cobbling together an interesting story that will sell, than in telling the truth. — Hadding Scott, Florida

Chairman Williams responds: Irving's Goebbels sells new for $240 on Amazon. We only have two copies available and notified Alliance members of these first, in the BULLETIN, before the general public could know about them. We offer these two new copies we have for half that, $120 each. Hadding, you might object to our carrying any of Irving's books, and your opinion of Irving is likely well-founded, if I know you — but what should we do, burn them? — or sell them to help finance Alliance-building? We will sell them and allow for your objection. By the way, I paid Irving $50 in 2012 for a pre-order of his then-soon-to-be-published biography of Himmler. Six years seems like a long wait for a pre-order.

The good news is Cosmotheist Books is functioning again and has added another ten titles to its online bookstore: William Pierce biographer Dr. Robert Griffin's One Sheaf, One Vine and his Living White; Nicholas Goodrick-Clark's Hitler's Priestess (on Savitri Devi); Theodore Kaufman's Germany Must Perish; Samual Roth's Jews Must Live; Richard McCulloch's Destiny of Angels and his The Nordish Quest; The Skeptic, A Life of H.L. Mencken by Terry Teachout; Alexander the Great, History's Greatest Conqueror as told by his contemporary biographers; and The Secret Relationship Between Blacks and Jews Volume II, by the Nation Of Islam. Find our ever-growing selection here: https://cosmotheistchurch.org/shop/

Chairman Will: I got the Bolshevism book and the bonus pamphlet that you sent about the SPLC. Thanks a lot for getting those out promptly. The SPLC — spawn of the loathsome Morris Dees; employer of the incomparably homely Heidi "Hideous" Beirich, lately the face of "tolerance" — poetic justice if ever there was. Potok, I think, has slithered off to darker, more malodorous sewers. The lot of them are a veritable Gilligan's Island of scabrous scum-buckets. I am also reminded how gullible the majority are, and how deceitful the elites. I would sooner rely on Nostradamus for the weekend weather report, or ride in a decrepit bi-plane piloted by Ray Charles, than depend on the SPLC for truth... Take care. — B.H., Illinois

Dear Chairman Williams: Are there others out there who are getting seriously angered by all the Black/White couples and homosexuality, appearing in TV programming? Everything from commercials, to sitcoms, to movies — they are all filled with this content in an attempt to foist it on us as the "New Normal." Undoubtedly this is coming from the ultra left wing ad agencies and news/network programmers (probably run by Jews, and the ever growing power of LGBTQs). New York and Hollywood love to push that garbage on us, and it's nauseating. One jewelry commercial I saw showed various married couples standing at their respective altars — one couple was two lesbians in white gowns, and another was a White woman and a Black man. Another time I saw a home improvement show, and a pair of lesbians, the homeowners, were holding hands and kissing in glee whenever the contractors showed them something they liked. The very last scene showed a silhouette of them; they kissed, then one of them said "I love you." Why should we who are trying to preserve our own traditional White culture for us and our children have to be subjected to this garbage against our Dennis Nix's cartoon in the National Alliance's Attack! tabloid in the mid-1970s: We have different TV sets 40 years later, but the race-destroying effect of Jewish control of the medium remains.

will? I try to avoid television now (except, I admit, sports programming — which has similar ads, and the whole kneeling for the anthem disaster). Network programmers have in the past answered criticisms about the sophomoric humor, and the sex and violence, that is injected into everything, by saying they are only giving us what the public wants. I find it difficult to believe the general public outside of the northeast (where I live) and Los Angeles wants to see this creeping erosion of our culture and morality. It's just another symptom of the illness infecting this country. This infection is really making me ill. — A.J., Massachusetts

Chairman Williams responds: To answer your question, A.J., I venture to guess that everyone reading your words here feels the same as you. The problem is that there is wide acceptance of today's demoralizing TV fare because of decades of gradual desensitizing of the viewing public to accept race-mixing and queers as normal rather than as exceedingly abnormal. It is not good for normal Whites to watch their television sets these days. The aggressive promotion of homosexuality and race-mixing in the media is no longer subtle; it is in our faces. We're having our noses rubbed in it.

Sports programming? There are more constructive ways for us to spend our time than to get caught up in televised sports. We can choose to ignore the electronic Jew. We can help build our own media to bypass the Jew-controlled news and entertainment industry, and reach our people with what they need to hear. We can seek out like-minded Whites who've also had a bellyful of anti-White garbage, and bring them into the National Alliance orbit — and expose them to an organization that promotes the good, the natural, the well-ordered, the heroic, and the noble that truly reflects the character of our race.

When there are enough of us determined, normal Whites, organized under the National Alliance banner, the game tips. As Kevin Strom said in his 6 October American Dissident Voices broadcast, "I Can't, But We Can," our type of individualistic, independent-minded White loyalists are difficult to organize, but it can and must be done. It begins with we who are already allied by the values and uncompromising principles of the Alliance recruiting the best of our racially responsible kinsmen to join with us — family, friends, neighbors, colleagues — to grow and strengthen our racial team against the highly-organized, so-called "racial minorities" whose stated intent is to replace our kind. Over our dead bodies they will!

New Opportunities, Never-Ending Struggle

Our Leap Forward

As work begins on our new property in Tennessee, I can relate to how Dr. William Pierce must have felt 33 years ago when he made the break from what he saw as the Northern Virginia urban nightmare and first moved a mobile home onto the National Alliance's newly purchased West Virginia property and began living there. He had already given reports of progress on The Land each month in the BULLETIN, starting when ground was first broken for the new National Office building, and he continued to give us reports about progress there until his death in 2002. That progress fell off soon after Dr. Pierce left us, until, within a few years, the once-buzzing campus was without any full-time staff. Maintenance of the buildings and property has become more challenging each year. Persuading Alliance members to volunteer their time to help Jay Hess with projects in West Virginia has been less than successful. Some have told me they will never go to West Virginia as long as enemies of the Alliance, including "that woman" (Garland Corse), still come through our gate. I do not blame them. I nevertheless urge Alliance volunteers, especially any with mechanical skills, to visit our West Virginia property, ignore the nasty neighbors, and help Jay with chores, staying in one of our nice guest houses. A few have taken me up on the offer.

With our expansion to a new campus and new facilities, there will be many new opportunities for volunteers to help us.

The "Battery" Soap Opera

At my sentencing for an alleged battery, a three-year-old misdemeanor, in West Virginia on 10 October, I was granted a continuance for the sentencing until 5 December. My attorney, Ms. Finch, and I presented a mutually-agreed-upon written motion requesting that she withdraw from her representation of me, which Judge Jennifer Dent nervously denied. That's okay. It bought me some needed time. She said she was prepared to sentence me, but I got my hands on the rule books and cited my rights to the court.

I voiced my intent to represent myself going forward, and stated that I'll make motions asking for a new trial and/or an appeal to the West Virginia Supreme Court after sentencing, if sentenced. I prefer not to do either but declaring that I intended to make those motions evidently caused some distress in the courtroom, especially among the perjurers. A witness I had in the gallery told me that my unhinged accuser, DeCourcy — yes, McLaughlin's "Legal Liaison and Executive Administrative Assistant," one and the same — was furious, waving her hands at the judge to be recognized, even leaning over the bar to speak into her Special Prosecutor's ear, probably telling him to object. She was ignored by both.

I informed Judge Dent that I intend also to make a motion that she reconsider her guilty verdict, as I'm entitled to request prior to sentencing. Ineffective counsel and procedural errors are two of the four possible elements, one of which, I'm told, must be demonstrated by me. The others are fraud and newly discovered evidence that works in my favor. I can easily claim all four in this tar baby misdemeanor case, but only one is required. I will concentrate my argument on procedural errors in violation of Canon 3 of the Judicial Code of Conduct (specifically, the sealing of my accuser's three ex parte communications to the judge without allowing me to question the outrageous claims therein, or to even be informed by my attorney that they had been sealed way back in December of 2016). I want them unsealed!

The judge is not anxious for me to represent myself and reveal in open court all of my accuser's angry and delusional accusations against the Pocahontas County, West Virginia establishment — page after page, single-spaced — in those communications she illegally sent to the judge. But I will. I'm entitled by law to do so according to the court's own rules. I do not care if DeCourcy's lunatic claims about me are unsealed; the truth about her coup attempt and her unreliability, untruthfulness, and raving madness needs to come out.

Falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus. That Latin legal maxim has been my own defense strategy, but not that of my inept defense attorneys: to impeach my accuser's repeated claim that I "attempted homicide" on her on 30 September, 2015, among her long list of imagined crimes, including capital crimes, that she claims I have also committed. When it is established that the accuser lies about one thing, everything else that comes through her lying teeth can and should be discounted. That solid defense was not used by my defense attorneys, who are part of the same local "club" as the judge, the special prosecutor, and DeCourcy's attorney. I was offered plea deals, in which I'd plead guilty and get minuscule or nominal punishment, by the prosecutors at least three separate times. I always rejected them because (1) the battery never happened, and (2) accepting a plea bargain is admitting guilt. Culpa in uno, culpa in omnibus: guilty in one area, guilty in all, or, from common sense English Law: "He who is once a criminal is presumed to be always a criminal in the same kind of way." Why should I accept the label of woman beater for the rest of my life when I have never once beaten a woman? I shouldn't. There are more important fights. However, this is a fight worth fighting, not just for myself, but for the Alliance. The alleged "battery" is the pretext for the judicial coup attempts. Fact!

In this pansy "me too" era when an accusation by a female becomes a guilty verdict, with no presumption of innocence for the accused male and little if any due process to find the truth of the matter, alleged "rape gang leader" Brett Kavenaugh has nothing on me over the past three and one half years. I've had three female judges and a female defense attorney through the ordeal. My attorney told me not to let the court know that I was a young Special Forces captain with two tours in South Vietnam 50 years ago — because that "would indicate a tendency for violence." Good grief!

I will not accept lightly probation, or time served, or anything other than acquittal or dismissal in this protracted judicial farce.

I also requested a hearing, as I'm entitled under West Virginia Code § 61-11A, to respond to my accuser's unhinged, 13-page Victim Impact Statement (VIS). Then I will finally be able to calmly and directly face my accuser for the first time since the alleged "battery" more than three years ago.

I will be able to examine her directly about the outrageous claims she makes: She literally claims that I am guilty of multiple murders, multiple murders-for-hire, rapes, beatings, kidnappings, arson, embezzlement, and much more. She states that I am a "gang leader," a "cult leader," and other nasty accusations too numerous to mention — all false, obviously, and all intended to privately influence the judge. DeCourcy still maintains the bizarre fictions that I am not National Alliance Chairman and that she represents the "real board of directors" of the Alliance. Her plotting, madness, and her malice, once revealed, will demonstrate to all the injustice of this legal charade.

I should have been provided that outrageous VIS at least ten days prior to sentencing, but wasn't. Ms. Finch will help me to properly prepare my motions and will sit beside me as "legal coach," but allows that I can do the questioning of my accuser myself if it ever comes to that. Can DeCourcy explain to the court, for example, how I was just now able to exchange National Alliance property in West Virginia for new National Alliance property in Tennessee in a complicated corporate transaction involving a dozen or so CPAs, attorneys, and realtors in five states if I did not have the authority to do so?

When she sees her plot unraveling, DeCourcy might assume an alias and flee the state, leaving no forwarding address, just as she did in 2015 after she made similar claims against three judges in Virginia in an incoherent 172-page "complaint."

If allowed, I'll be able to focus on her ridiculous phantom "board of directors," using her own words, which, when refuted with overwhelming firsthand evidence to the contrary, go to her motive for making the false battery claim in the first place. The Big Picture of her sloppy, convoluted attempts to somehow take over National Alliance assets will be revealed one way or another.

Last minute update as we go to press: DeCourcy was last spotted around dusk, Saturday, 27 October, exiting the National Alliance's West Virginia campus gate in a 26-foot U-Haul truck filled with her possessions, destination presently unknown. Perhaps my prediction above came true even before I'd expected it, and she is anxious to avoid facing her wrongly-accused victim in court. W. W. W.
